

Tullan Strand

‘Bíonn trúpaí sióg le cloisteáil síoraí, agus anois agus arís feictear iad ag eitilt leo faoi luas ó thaobh go taobh.’

An tOir. G N Wright, 1834

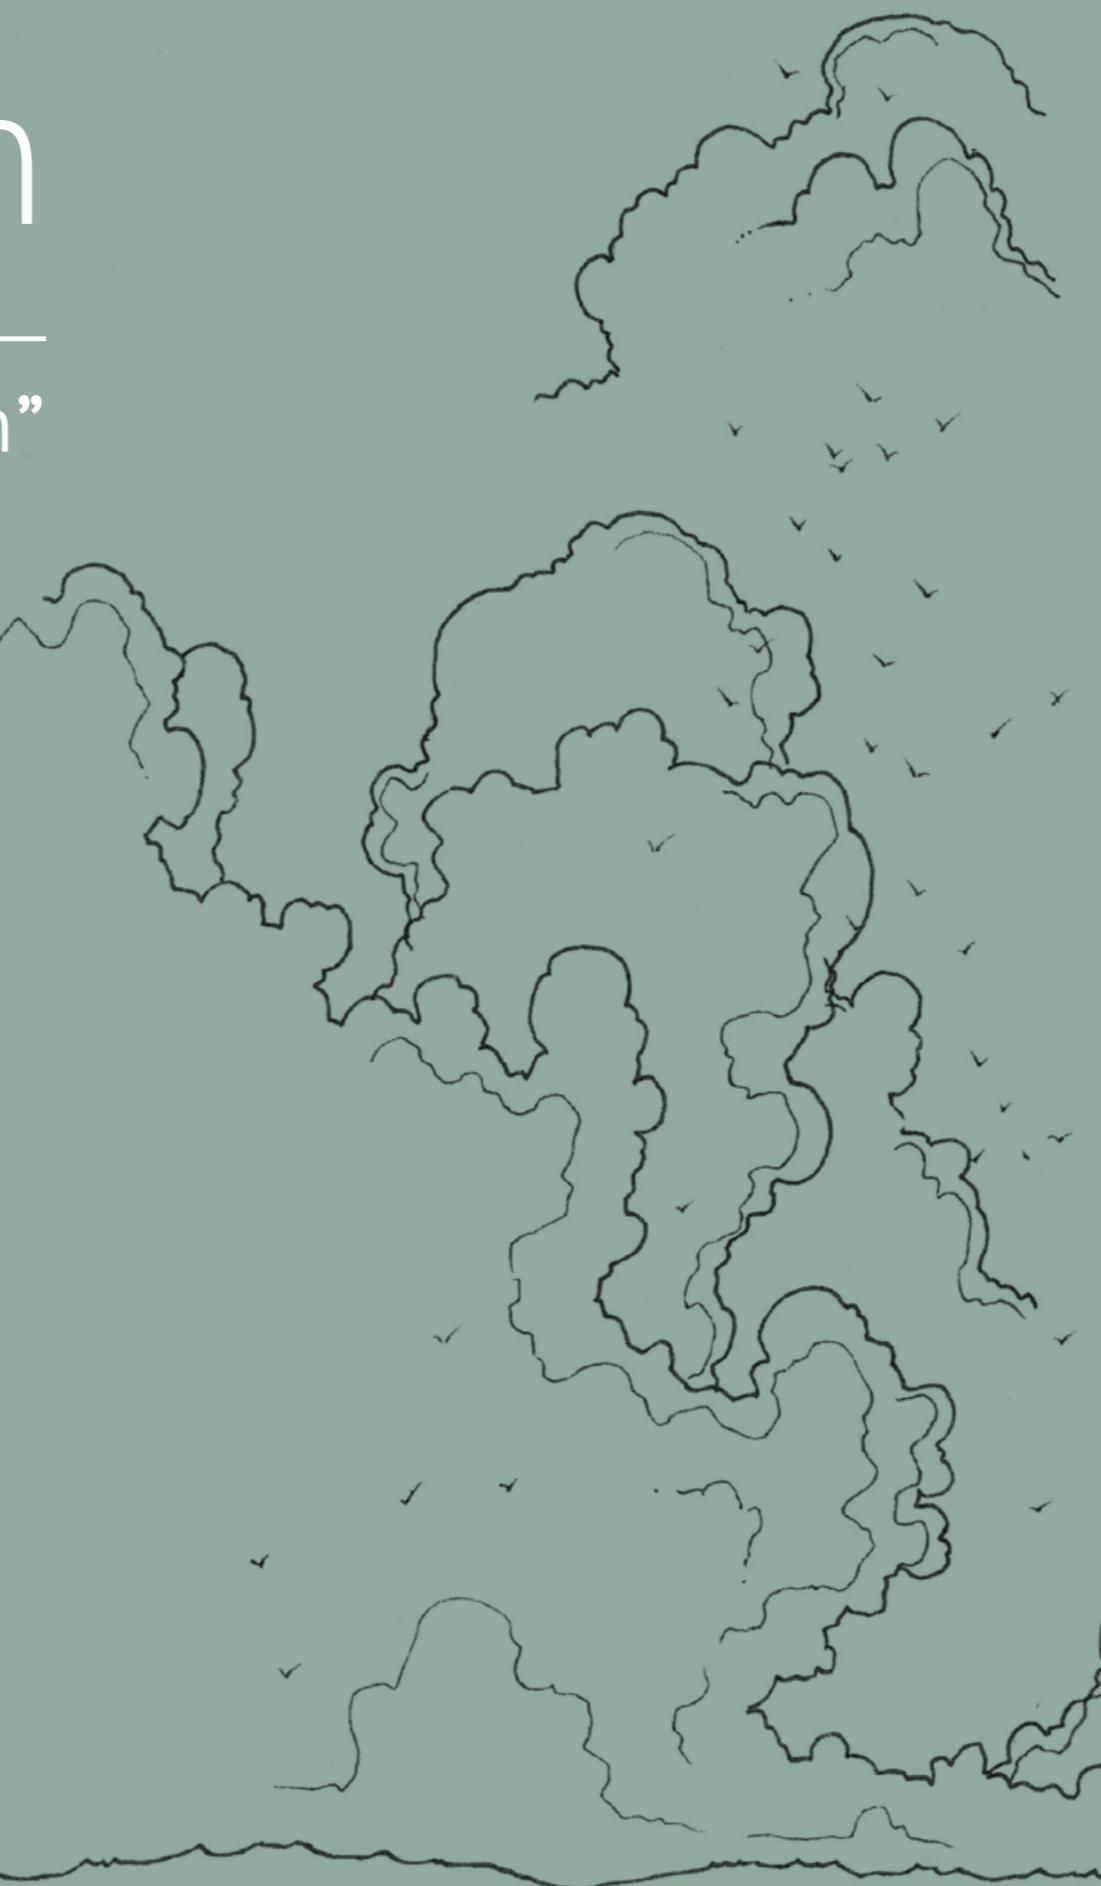

‘Troops of fairies are constantly heard, and sometimes seen flying hastily from end to end.’

Rev G N Wright, 1834

Trá Tullan

“tra TULLen”

1 Caith seal ag féachaint ar na tonnmharcaithe ar bharr na dtionta sa Mhullach Mór.
Watch surfers in action at Mullaghmore.

2 Siúil ar do shuaimhneas feadh Shiúlód Rougey i mBun Dobhráin más mian leat radharc den scoth a fháil ar Bhinn Ghulbain agus Sliabh Liag.
Stroll along Bundoran's Rougey Walk for views of Benbulbin and Sliabh Liag.

3 Bain sult as atmaisfeár suaimheach Bhun Dobhráin, ceann de na trá-bhailte is mó tóir in Éirinn.
Enjoy the holiday atmosphere of Bundoran, one of Ireland's top resorts.

Droichead na Sí
Le caoinchead ó Leabharlann Náisiúnta na hÉireann
Fairy Bridge
Courtesy of the National Library of Ireland

Legends of the rocks

Two rocks on the beach are puffing holes.
When the tide is right, the sea crashes through,
blowing water upwards.

The Fairy Bridges

Centuries ago people believed that fairies haunted the rocks and that the boom of the waves was the sound of fairy guns. Holidaymakers flocked to visit the Bridges and sent postcards home.

The Wishing Chair

Famous people from poets to surfers have sat in the Wishing Chair. The tradition is to approach it carefully not to disturb its powers and then to sit down slowly holding on to both ‘arms’. Make a silent wish, keep it private and it might come true.